

I drive 300 to 400 mile trips fairly often. Having the ability to listen to one station and not having to search for a new one every time I out distance a standard station's range is quite a benefit. And since I drive in the heavily congested northeast corridor, not having to fumble around for a new station is a safe way to take these long trips.